Greenleaf's Overalls, Blood-stained And Torn, Found.

They Prove Important In Boscawen Murder Case.

Prisoner Insists He Threw Them In Laundry Pile.

Concord, Oct. 28.—A search has revealed a clew in the murder case of Mrs. Charles A. Folsom, who was killed at Boscawen on Wednesday last, which the officials believe may lead to the conviction of George Greenleaf, who is held on suspicion of having committed the crime.

The new evidence is a pair of overalls, blood-stained and torn, which Greenleaf is alleged to have worn on the day of the tragedy. A force of men from the county farm, under direction of Sheriff M. Swain, Clough and Deputy Sheriff Fred R. Fellows, made another search of the locality about the murder, especially to find the overalls, which it was supposed were secreted somewhere in that vicinity.

In the pasture where Greenleaf drove the county farm cows a strip of cloth was noticed in a pile of brush, which, upon being drawn out, proved to be a suspender, attached to which was a pair of overalls. Upon being examined, they were found to be spotted with blood on the front and on the left side near the pocket.

Greenleaf has no right arm, and upon that side of the overalls no trace of blood could be found. Between the legs was a torn piece, another fact that may play a more or less important part in the trial. It had been Greenleaf's custom to wear two pairs of overalls, but at the time of his arrest he was found to have on but one and he then declared that the week before he took off the second pair and threw them down at the door of the laundry of the county farm to be washed and had worn but one pair since that time. He stated then that the old overalls could be identified by a torn place between the legs, which was made when climbing over a barbed wire fence.

Inmates of the county farm stated that Greenleaf had worn two pairs of overalls on the week of the murder, a fact that was noticeable to them because the legs of one pair were longer than those of the other, and showed at the bottoms.

When Greenleaf was told that the overalls had been found under a pile of brush in the pasture, he again maintained his innocence and stoutly declared that he knew nothing what ever about the find, as the overalls which he discarded the week before he had thrown down at the laundry door to be washed, as he had stated. The county authorities will at once place the overalls in the hands of a chemist to analyze and determine the nature of the blood stains upon them.

There is great excitement, and farmers are rushing to the scene with shot gun and rifle to join in the conflict. The riot is the outcome of the burning of a negro last week.

THE MCKINLEY MEMORIAL.

National Arch Association Appeals for Contributions.

The William McKinley National Memorial Arch association has issued the following statement to the public:

"President McKinley's memory is enshrined in the hearts of his countrymen. But their unexampled affection demands expression in a material memorial, national in character, to be erected at the National capital, the scene of his greatest labors and achievements. The William McKinley National Memorial Arch Association has been incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia to meet this desire by the erection of a national memorial arch in honor of President McKinley in the city of Washington, by national popular subscription.

"It is proposed to place the memorial arch preferably at the Washington approach to the Memorial bridge across the Potomac, connecting Washington with Arlington, which President McKinley earnestly desired and recommended to Congress as a monument to American patriotism.

"Contributors to its funds will be made members of the William McKinley National Memorial Arch association. The treasurer, Hon. Lyman J. Gage, secretary of the treasury of the United States, Washington, D. C., will receive all contributions and will forward certificates of membership to contributors. Contributions of money may be handed to postmasters, managers of telegraph, telephone and express offices, or deposited with banks or other financial institutions and newspapers. They are hereby authorized and requested to receive and transmit contributions to the treasurer. The association heartily invites and confidently expects the cooperation of the governors of the states and territories, the mayors of cities and all other public officials, of the press of the country, of the churches, colleges and schools and of all organized societies, and requests that they will take immediate action to promote its objects by making and securing subscriptions. All communications except remittances should be addressed to Thomas F. Walsh, secretary, Washington, D. C. "The association is in entire sympathy with the proposition to erect a suitable memorial to the late president at his grave in Canton, Ohio.

MANY QUESTIONS.

Admiral Schley Answered Them All Most Clearly.

Rigid Cross Examination By Capt. Lemly On Monday.

Number Of Spectators Decreased, But Interest Was Again Lively.

Washington, Oct. 28.—There was another large attendance at the Schley court of inquiry today. The sitting was resumed promptly at 11 o'clock.

Admiral Schley took the stand, and, after being reminded by Admiral Dewey that he was still under oath, continued his testimony. It was with the understanding that, after comparatively few questions had been asked by Mr. Rayner, he would be placed in the hands of Judge Advocate Lemly and Mr. Hanna for cross examination.

Mr. Rayner's questions were again directed toward throwing light upon disputed points in the controversy and most of them concerned conversations which various witnesses for the navy department had reported themselves to have had with the admiral. Before the adjournment on Friday he had asked about the majority of these conversations and the principal ones left for today were those which were reported to have taken place between Admiral Schley and Admiral (then Capt.) Evans of the Iowa, and Commander Sharpe of the Vixen. The admiral's version of these interviews differed considerably from that of the other parties to them.

Mr. Rayner then called Admiral Schley's attention to the testimony of Admiral Taylor, who as captain during the battle off Santiago, and Capt. Dawson, who commanded the marines on that vessel, to the effect that the Brooklyn when she made the loop, went southward a mile or a mile and a half.

"I think they are entirely and absolutely mistaken," replied the witness. The Brooklyn did not pass to the southward of the line, except the distance, perhaps of her tactical diameter, which surely was not greater than 600 yards, and from that time she steered a course parallel to the Spaniards, and I do not think we were over 2300 and 2400 yards at any time from the Spanish line. I say emphatically that the Brooklyn did not run south and any statement to the contrary is a mistake."

The witness stated in reply to a question from Mr. Rayner that when he started to the westward from Santiago he left the St. Paul at the latter place.

Admiral Schley then told of how his papers were boxed up by his secretary for transmission to the department as the regulations require. About this time he went to Porto Rico as a member of the Porto Rican commission, and this box was put on the steamer, together with his baggage. His box finally reached Washington and was then opened for the first time, the witness desiring to see if the papers were complete. He turned the box over to the department about Feb. 6. He estimated that this box contained all his papers except the documents he had turned over to the court, namely a copy of the No. 7 despatch.

The admiral then, by the permission of the court, reverted to his narrative of Friday, and spoke of the hits on the Spanish squadron.

The Brooklyn, he testified, was the only ship carrying five-inch guns. A record of the hits received by the enemy showed that thirty per cent of the hits scored by the American fleet came from those guns on the Brooklyn. The Brooklyn received thirty of the forty-two hits from the Spanish fleet, or about seventy per cent.

Capt. Lemly asked the witness to look at the signal book of the Brooklyn for May 22, and to read a signal which had been made at 5:35 a. m. by the Texas to the flagship. This he did, reading as follows: "Please tell me what we have to do today."

"To the flag to Texas: When we get close to the port we will blockade it and unite, but will keep underway ready for anything."

In answer to a question from Capt. Lemly regarding the orders "Clear ship for action," Admiral Schley explained that the ships were practically cleared for action all the time, but that there was always a certain amount of paraphernalia aboard the ships to prevent persons falling overboard, or awnings, which had to be removed, and that was what he had in mind when he signalled to "clear ship for action."

Admiral Schley was asked why he did not personally communicate with Capt. McCalla when he met the Marblehead on the way down. He replied that he saw the auxiliary coming down from the Marblehead to communicate with him. It was Capt. McCalla's duty, if he possessed information to communicate it.

UNFORTUNATE MAN.

Thomas Smith Taken From Newfields to the County Farm.

Newfields, Oct. 28.—The man identified as Thomas Smith of Portsmouth, who was found lying unconscious by the roadside in a clump of bushes Saturday morning, was taken to the hospital at the county farm in Brentwood last night. Rumors that the fellow was the victim of drugs were rife Sunday, but they are now believed to have been unfounded, as it was pronounced by Dr. Varney as a had case of alcoholism.

Yesterday morning Smith's case was considered critical and recovery was far from certain. It is supposed that he lay by the roadside nearly all night, as he was seen with companions about ten o'clock. As the weather was hardly suitable for an out-of-door nap, it is a great wonder that he did not perish.

Smith has been an employe at the Whitcomb farm at Stratham during the past summer, a position which he held at the time of his misfortune.

MAUSOLEUM FOR CZOLGOSZ.

Chicago Woman Trying to Raise $200,000 to Build One.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—To save the body of Leon F. Czolgosz from burial in a pauper's grave and to erect over it a $200,000 mausoleum has become the life object of Miss Henrietta Tice, a book canvasser and Chicago socialist. She has canvassed the leaders of both the Socialists and Anarchists of the city, begging them to aid her, and so enthusiastic has she become that she believes plans will be fulfilled and the body and mausoleum will be placed in Chicago.

The woman's enthusiasm is not shared by the Chicago Anarchists with whom the assassin associated while he was here, and the Socialists scout the idea. Supt. Schrade of Waldheim cemetery has informed several persons who have been making demonstrations at the Anarchists' tomb at that place, that on the anniversary of the hanging of the Haymarket rioters, Nov. 11, no demonstration will be allowed, although floral emblems may be deposited by a small committee sent to the cemetery for that purpose.

RAISE NO WHEAT IN 1902.

Kansans Propose This Plan to Send Up the Price.

Independence, Kan., Oct. 28.—A gigantic scheme is proposed in southern Kansas to run up the price of wheat next year. It is original with B. H. Glizer and other wheat raisers of this city, and they hope to include in it all the farmers of the wheat belt of the country.

Their plan is to have every farmer sign an agreement not to raise an acre of wheat in 1902 and thus force up the price of wheat. Each farmer will be asked to contribute $1 toward advancing the cause when he signs the agreement.

There is said to be no politics in this proposed organization, which the promoters say is spreading rapidly.

WHEN FLORA DRIVES.
When Flora drives, I just sit back and smile,
Enjoying her discomfort awhile.
Before I act the part assigned to me,
She takes the ribbons almost savagely.
Soon as we lose the haunts of trade and gulls,
The cue is taken soon. In sleepy style
Old Dobbin ambles up the woodland aisle.
It's just as well, perhaps, he cannot see
When Flora drives.
She says I take advantage—would revile
My thieving ways. Her tears are crocodile.
She makes me thief with opportunity.
I tell her so, and she relents. Not yet
But that's the shortest, most delightful mile
When Flora drives.

EXTREMES IN THE SHOPS.

Poor Girls and Rich Women Who Affix Want Scraps of Goods.

The girls' clothes were neat and her face was pretty, but she looked rather out of place in an ultra fashionable and high priced Broadway dry goods store. One would expect her to be there shopping in another quarter of the town, where the stores are more modest and the fabrics not so costly. Her air showed entire self-possession, however, when she strode up to a cloth counter.

"Have you anything to match this?" she asked, turning up the sleeve of her jacket.

"Hum, let me see," said the man behind the counter. "How much would you want?"

"Only a small piece," said the girl promptly. "I've got to wear this jacket another season. It's worn a little on the edge of the sleeve, there, pointing the skirt part, and I want just enough to make a new cuff for it. I thought maybe you'd have a scrap that you had no use for."

"I see," said the clerk, eyeing her in an unkindly way. "How would this do?" and he showed her a strip of cloth which he took from a box on the shelf.

The girl held the fragment on her coat and made a critical comparison.

"That's the very thing I want," she said finally. "But there isn't quite enough in this piece."

"Are you sure it won't do?" asked the clerk.

"Yes," returned the girl, looking wistfully at the cloth. "I'm sure it's not enough."

The clerk leaned over the counter and glanced keenly up and down the aisle. Then he pulled down a roll of the goods which matched the girl's coat and, cutting off about a quarter of a yard, handed it to her.

"Take it along, miss," he said good naturedly. "I guess you've got enough now for the cuffs."

The girl thanked him, smiling brightly, and hastened from the store with her prize.

"Do you have many cuffs like that?" asked a woman who was buying dress goods at $1 a yard.

"Oh, my, yes," returned the clerk. "A good many. And we always try to accommodate them. It's only by helping each other that we get along in this world. That girl is a dressmaker's messenger. Her wages are small, very small, yet she has to keep her old looking maid. Of course we don't make a habit of giving away our goods. That would hardly do. But in a store of this kind the clerks in charge of important counters have privileges not enjoyed elsewhere. We have a stock of odds and ends on hand at times and we are allowed to give them away if we see fit."

"Don't you ever make a mistake?" asked the customer, bending over to examine the sixteenth roll of cloth submitted to her inspection.

"Well, yes, now and then we do get fooled," replied the clerk. "Sometimes women whom we know can well afford to pay for all they need come begging for a scrap of this or a fragment of that, but they don't interest us now as much as the rich women who come to buy small pieces to patch their husbands' clothes. You'll scarcely believe it, would you? Well, it's so, just the same. Take Mrs. —, for instance, and the clerk named the wife of a very rich man. "She came to me for small pieces of lining and other cloth to repair her husband's suit."

"And she better make my face about telling me what she wants the stuff for either. There are others, too, I could name, some of whom have amounts running into the thousands every year."

Bagley's Revenge.

On one occasion, just previous to opening in one of the large eastern cities, Joseph Bagley dismissed his property man, Bagley, for humiliating him before a number of friends by familiarly addressing him as "Jogey."

Bagley took revenge and that night paid his way to the city to see Mr. Jefferson, president of the Van Wyck Hotel.

The angry fellow had just driven from the city in a limousine, when Bagley called and, with a world of politeness, asked, "Then I'm no interest in the house?"

The house was empty still, the audience half in tears, when Bagley cracked voice resounded. "Only 80 per cent, Jogey—only 80 per cent."

A Singular Marriage Custom.

A curious custom exists in the Prussian royal family of selecting every day a half dozen young couples to go to marry and having them wedded in the garden church at Potsdam on the anniversary of the death of Queen Louise of Prussia. After the ceremony each bride receives a gift of a sum equivalent to about $125 and a handsome family Bible.

THE LINEN WOMAN.

SWAPPING THAT IS PROFITABLE TO BOTH SIDES.

Women Who Buy Fine Linen in New York and Trade It in the Country Towns For Old Clothes, Which They Fix Up and Sell.

A stout, coarse looking woman with a shawl about her shoulders and headgear of the vintage of 1880 or thereabout received so much attention in the big Broadway linen store from members of the firm as well as from submissives that she aroused the curiosity of other customers, some of whom had come in carriages and were not used to being asked to wait a few moments. The stout woman didn't look as though she would wait for her personal use any of the fine linen that she was examining, yet she examined each piece produced she made some comment on it that proved that she knew her subject well. When she was through her shopping, she arose from her chair, and, with a businesslike way of her hand toward a great heap of fine linen tablecloths, napkins, doilies, towels, sheets, etc., which she had tossed to one side, she said that she would take that.

"Now, how much is that?" she inquired.

"Four hundred and sixty dollars," replied the clerk.

"Well, send it to the same place," said the woman, and then she wrote out a check for the amount, which was accepted without a moment's hesitation. A member of the firm accompanied her to the door and bowed her out with the same courtesy that he would have shown to the wealthiest customer on his list.

The value of the firm was estimated at eight hundred dollars, and the stout woman, with her purchases, left the store.

"No," he said, "she is not a customer. She's the linen woman, that's all. I don't know her. Well, I guess she's a good business in small ways. She knows that linen for old clothes, and she'll fix 'em up, and she'll sell 'em for a profit."

MISS STONE.

SWAPPING THAT IS PROFITABLE TO BOTH SIDES.

Women Who Buy Fine Linen in New York and Trade It in the Country Towns For Old Clothes, Which They Fix Up and Sell.

A stout, coarse looking woman with a shawl about her shoulders and headgear of the vintage of 1880 or thereabout received so much attention in the big Broadway linen store from members of the firm as well as from submissives that she aroused the curiosity of other customers, some of whom had come in carriages and were not used to being asked to wait a few moments. The stout woman didn't look as though she would wait for her personal use any of the fine linen that she was examining, yet she examined each piece produced she made some comment on it that proved that she knew her subject well. When she was through her shopping, she arose from her chair, and, with a businesslike way of her hand toward a great heap of fine linen tablecloths, napkins, doilies, towels, sheets, etc., which she had tossed to one side, she said that she would take that.

"Now, how much is that?" she inquired.

"Four hundred and sixty dollars," replied the clerk.

"Well, send it to the same place," said the woman, and then she wrote out a check for the amount, which was accepted without a moment's hesitation. A member of the firm accompanied her to the door and bowed her out with the same courtesy that he would have shown to the wealthiest customer on his list.

The value of the firm was estimated at eight hundred dollars, and the stout woman, with her purchases, left the store.

"No," he said, "she is not a customer. She's the linen woman, that's all. I don't know her. Well, I guess she's a good business in small ways. She knows that linen for old clothes, and she'll fix 'em up, and she'll sell 'em for a profit."

And When They Got In They Fell Down at Once.

EXETER, Oct. 29.—John Wilson and Patrick J. O'Shea, both of Portsmouth, made a grave mistake yesterday which led to their being sent to Brentwood to serve a six months term. The two men have but just been liberated from the resort where they are booked to spend their winter season. They appeared in Exeter Saturday evening, much the worse for liquor, but still destitute more, they sought of someone on the street a place where they would be likely to slack their thirst. This someone was a practical joker who directed the strangers to the town hall building, in which is located the police headquarters, as a possible point for finding what they desired.

The men were in a condition to take the suggestion in good faith, and, believing that the building was a hotel, they entered the main hall and proceeded up the stairway and through the rooms in search of the office. Unsuccessful in this, they started downward one coming in contact on the way with a railing which could hardly bear the lead weight, collapsing and carrying him to the floor.

Officers Howe and Richardson were in the police station at the time and started out on a tour of investigation upon hearing the sounds of destruction. Their appearance interested the two strangers, who inquired if it were a possible thing to procure a drink at the hotel. The officers kindly explained that it was a temperance house, but volunteered the information that there were several good rooms vacant at the hotel. Accordingly they assigned Wilson and O'Shea to apartments on the ground floor, and it was not until the happened that the men awoke to the situation. "This is a joke, isn't it?" inquired one, and the officer had to admit that it was one on them as he turned the key.

In police court this morning Judge Shute sent the pair back to Brentwood for six months. Two first-time drunk were also present in court, one being given ninety days to sober off in at his own request, while the other paid the costs of his case, and departed.

IN THE MARINE CORPS.

General Heywood Submits His Report of a Year's Work.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—In his annual report upon the condition and service of the United States marine corps for the last year, Gen. Charles Heywood renews a former recommendation that Congress shall make the rank of the commandant of the marine corps that of major general. This recommendation, it is stated, is embarrassing to the general, inasmuch as such action would result in his own promotion, but he points out that the present authorized strength of the corps—6062 men—should entitle the commandant to the rank of major general, as the army regulations provide that the appropriate command for a major general is four regiments or 4800 men. He calls attention to the fact that all bureau chiefs of the navy department have the rank of rear admirals, which corresponds to that of major general in the army.

General Heywood strongly recommends that the law providing that officers of the navy who served with honor in the Civil war may retire with the next higher rank be extended to the navy of the rebellion, be given the same consideration.

The total number of casualties in the enlisted force of the corps in the last year caused by discharges, desertions, deaths and retirements, was 250. A. The date of the report, Oct. 1, there were 72 officers and 218 enlisted men in the corps at various stations in the United States.

Before closing his report General Heywood takes occasion to express his appreciation of courtesies extended by the army in the way of transportation and supplies. In conclusion, he says: "I am pleased to state that the corps has been able to meet promptly and satisfactorily the many and varied demands which have been made upon it during the year, and feel justified in stating that it has maintained its high reputation for efficiency."

EVENING AT HOME.

It Should Be a Pleasant Time For Husband and Wife.

Home should be the most desirable place in the world. Every man ought to be able to look forward to his evening at home with the greatest of pleasure. It should be a haven of rest, where the cares that distract the day are not, an atmosphere of quiet and comfort where husband and family meet on social ground and for a brief portion of the day lay aside all worries. It is somewhat unusual for a husband to fret his wife with a detailed account of the mistakes of his stenographer and the stupidity of the office boy and the negligence of the janitor. Yet how often the theme of conversation refers to the shortcomings of the cook, the bad manners of the woman and the tardiness of the grocery boy. Harry Prescott Spofford comments on this question in a sensible manner in the Los Angeles Times.

There are some husbands who take an interest in all the trifles, but there are more to whom they are inexpressibly wearisome. It is natural that the wife, shut in the narrow compass of her home, desiring to occupy her husband's attention, should talk to him of the things that comprise her world. But it would be far wiser for her to spend an hour of every day informing herself in the papers of magazines and reviews of the current affairs of the larger world or in reading some one volume that can be reported on and discussed, for in such case she makes herself entertaining as well as helpful, but in the other case she is exceedingly likely after a period more or less delayed to see the good man take his coat and hat and depart for the club or some other region where his ears will not suffer from peevish fretfulness and trivial nothings.

Even if it were an assumed fact that man is an selfish and brutal as Kipling says he is, he is still, on the same evidence, companionable. And the wife who nevertheless in spite of such circumstances wants his companionship must make her own agreeable to him, for the man does not live, even though he be near sainthood, who does not prefer a cheerful atmosphere to a dismal one. And even if the wife has been annoyed and vexed all day or if sick and tired to death she will do more in the long run for her own happiness by suppressing the recital of her troubles and discomforts and leaving her husband free to do as he pleases, to look forward to the peace of his evening at home.

Some Masculine Conclusions.

"Woman," said an old codger to a writer for Puck during one of his meditative spells, "is a perpetual paradox, a chronic contumacious without an answer, an unknown quantity possessed of peculiar potentialities, a convenient of characteristic contradictions and an amorphous aggregation of other attributes which are not alternative."

"She is man's greatest enemy, blessing and the cause of most of his misery. She outlives his tired nerves with the ease of her gentle voice, but she always has the last word in every controversy with him and incidentally about 97 per cent of the preceding conversation. She brings him into the world and a few years later talks him to death."

"Most of man's trouble is caused by woman, but so deftly does she play the lead on him that he never has a notion of trouble is that he wanders merrily about hunting for more. Otherwise there would be very few second wives."

"She seems all advice in the selection of a husband, but takes two other years along to help her pick out a hat. The less actual comfort to be obtained from a thing the more enjoyment a woman gets out of its possession. At sixteen she is a young woman; at twenty-five, if still unmarried, she is a girl. She will face the grim specter of death without a flinch and swoon at the sight of a mouse. She is the dearest thing in all the world and the most ungrateful. She is as she is, and that's all there is to do about it. The only man who ever fully understood a woman is the man who understands that he doesn't understand her and has got sense enough to let it go at that."

For a Table Decoration.

A new fashion is to use pineapples as parlor ornaments. Caraganta cardinals has green leaves, the inner ones of the rosette having a magnificent orange red tint. Out of this rosette rises the brilliant blossom. The brilliantly tinted leaves of blooming plants retain their color a whole year.

Other plants show beautifully marked leaves. Billbergia rhodophylla, for instance, has fitted leaves, with wavy white cross lines. Strong plants bear stately blossoms supported by large rose colored leaves. These plants collect a great deal of water in the funnel shaped base of the leaves, whereby the atmospheric moisture necessary to the plants is created and maintained. The plants renew themselves by sprouts, so that one plant properly attended to provides never ending pleasure.

The value of vapor and hot air baths as a means of promoting the respiratory functions of the skin has been recognized from very ancient times.

Polished Floors.

In Europe, where polished floors have so long been popular, it is the custom to polish them carefully and preferably with a cloth fastened on the shoe. Professional cleaners or polishers have learned to skate about at a great rate and to do polishing quickly and well.

A WHITE RAT.

How It Is Potted, Fuddled and Sat Upon by His Monkey Friends.

At one of the zoological gardens a cage of white rats stands quite near the cage of monkeys. The monkeys had always shown so much curiosity about the rats that the keeper one day concluded to put one of the rats in with them to see what they would do. They fairly screamed with delight when the rat entered and at once began to make friends with him. The rat was inclined to run away from them for the first day or two, but seeing that they did not intend to do him any harm he lost his fear and permitted them to fondle and caress him as much as they liked. This they did constantly, stroking his white fur, holding him in their arms and offering him part of their food. They even picked out the choice bits and gave them to him, as if he were a guest whom they were delighted to entertain.

One day a new idea occurred to the oldest monkey. He had the rat in his arms, and putting it down gently on the floor, he cautiously sat down on it. The rat did not move, nor did it seem to object to the queer use to which the monkey was putting it. As for the monkey, he looked about, with a broad grin on his face, and fairly chuckled with delight over the soft cushion he had found.

After sitting there for awhile he got up so the other monkeys might try it, and they were as much pleased as he had been.

From that time on the rat was in daily use as a cushion, and he took it with perfect good temper, never objecting to it in the least.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Whatever be the immediate or technical significance of the premature disclosure that the British War Office is contemplating the possible contingency of calling out the entire volunteer force of 200,000 men, it is evident that it has relation to the stubborn South African situation. Additional troops seem to be needed there if real progress is to be made toward ending the war and stopping the drain of over $1,000,000 a day incurred in its prosecution. The work of wearing out the burghers, which was going on with considerable success some months ago, has lately been moving backward, and there are probably more Boers under arms now than there were at the beginning of September. More Tommies will be needed, and more funds will have to be provided by Parliament. The privileges of the British constitution have but lately been withdrawn from the Cape Colonists. The programme of hangings and banishments has been definitely inaugurated; it is an appropriate complement to the hideous death lists of the concentration camps. It cannot yet be said that the end is in sight, nor can any one surely foretell what tragedies may be written if the Boers inaugurate the retaliations for which they have the opportunity and for which they are getting provocation.

DIED IN THE CHAIR TODAY

President McKinley's Murderer Pays for the Great Crime.

Heavy Current of Electricity Was Turned On at First.

Gradually Reduced Until the Body Was Relaxed and Life Was Gone.

(Special to the Herald.)
Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Leon Czolgosz, the foul murderer of President McKinley, was pronounced dead at about 7.15 o'clock this morning, after a current of electricity had been turned through his body.
At 5.30 the warden of the prison read the death warrant to the condemned man, after which the murderer ate his breakfast. At 7.05, after the witnesses had been seated in the death chamber, there was a final test of the apparatus, Dr. McDonald standing beside the electrical chair.
At 7.10, the murderer was led from his cell and hustled into the straps that bound him to the chair. The binding of the murderer to the chair took but half a minute. At 7.11, a heavy current was turned on and gradually reduced. The current was subsequently applied until the body had relaxed. Dr. McDonald then pronounced the murderer dead.
Czolgosz suffered a slight nervous attack late last night, and when Dr. Carlos F. McDonald and Dr. Gerin, prison physicians, visited the cell, they found him in a state of extreme nervousness, that showed itself in dilated eyes and free flowing perspiration. When they finished their examination the prisoner turned suddenly away and retired into a corner of his cell refusing to talk. They were of the opinion that, while very nervous, he did not show signs of collapse.
Waldok Czolgosz and his brother-in-law, Thomas Bandowski, saw Leon for the last time, between nine and ten o'clock in the evening. With Supt. Collins he went to his cell and talked with him for twenty minutes.
The assassin talked in a slow, hesitating manner.
"No one, nobody had anything to do with it but me," he said.
"That is not how you were brought up," said the brother, "and you ought to tell us everything now."
"I haven't got anything to tell," he answered in a surly manner.
"Do you want to see the priests again?" asked his brother.
And he answered with more vehemence than he had previously shown.
"No, I—them; don't send them here again, I don't want them."
The brother-in-law interjected, "That's right, Leon."
The brother looked rather disturbed by the answer. Stopping up close to the bars, the condemned man said:
"And don't you have any praying over me, when I'm dead. I don't want it. I don't want any of their d—d religion."
There was a painful pause of a few minutes and then the relatives resumed casual conversation with him, to which he replied in monosyllables, until the brother-in-law suggested, much to Supt. Collins' surprise, that he and the brother be allowed to witness the execution. Leon spoke up.
"Yes, Mr. Superintendent, let them see me killed."
Supt. Collins said "No," emphatically and ordered them to say good-by.
Czolgosz had not a word of farewell for any one. There was nothing to show that the assassin has any feeling.
"Well, good-by, Leon," said Waldok Czolgosz.
"Good-by," was the laconic reply.
"Do you want to send any messages to father or the others before they take you over there?" nodding toward the execution chamber.
Czolgosz only shook his head. Silently the brother put his hands through the bars and shook hands with the prisoner. The brother-in-law did the same, and then, with Supt. Collins, they walked away.
When the relative reached the warden's office they again renewed their request to see the execution, but Mr. Collins said no again. After they were gone Supt. Collins visited the prisoner alone to see if he had anything to say, but there was no change in the assassin's demeanor.
Czolgosz dressed in a very simple manner for the execution—a pair of black trousers a loose gray shirt and a pair of gray socks. The left leg of the trousers was slit at the bottom to permit the free adjustment of the electrode, and the shirt was open at the neck, so the doctors might take the heart count with the stethoscope. A plain pine coffin, stained black, had been prepared.
What will be done with the body? By law, it must be buried in quicklime, which will consume it utterly in twenty-four hours, and under ordinary circumstances the burial will be in a lot owned by the state, next to Fort Hill cemetery. Many other murderers lie there, their graves unmarked, and covered by a tangle of long, coarse grass. But whether Czolgosz will be buried there, or where he will be buried, is something only Supt. Collins and Warden Mead know, and they refuse to discuss the question.

"The body will remain here," was all Mr. Collins would say.
It is believed an effort will be made to keep secret where President McKinley's assassin is buried.

THE LOSS IS HEAVY.

The Pan American exposition at Buffalo will close in a few days, after a season of financial failure. Estimates of the losses suffered by the corporation, which conducted the great fair are being made, ranging as high as a total of $4,000,000 for all interests. The stockholders, it is stated, will receive back so portion of the $2,500,000 which they paid in to insure the exposition, while the contractors who built the structure will lose $1,000,000 and the issue of $500,000 second mortgage bonds will be defaulted, in addition to about 20 per cent of the first mortgage bonds. Thus it would seem that the fair has been a tremendous loss, even beyond the fear of some of the most pessimistic. Much of the loss may be attributed to the tragedy which occurred at the fair, costing the life of the president. The exposition was closed for two or three days in consequence and the subsequent attendance was seriously affected. There was also a decided failure in the attendance earlier in the season, when it was anticipated that perhaps at least an expense paying party might be maintained.

CREMATION CONTEMPLATED.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 29.—The body of Leon F. Czolgosz, says the Evening News today, "will be reduced to ashes in the Buffalo crematory. Undertaker Brady will take charge of the remains of the assassin when they arrive in this city after the autopsy, which will be performed in Auburn. Mr. Brady stated to a News reporter today that the body probably would not be cremated before Wednesday on account of the delay incident to the autopsy. Arrangements have been made with the Buffalo crematory to have the necessary preparations completed for 11 o'clock Wednesday morning."

THEATRICAL NEWS

OUR NEW MINISTER.

Our New Minister, the latest pastoral comedy drama founded on New England life, from the joint pens of Denman Thompson and George W. Ryer, authors of The Old Homestead, which was seen here for the first time last season, will again hold forth at Music hall on Wednesday evening. The piece is filled with character sketches, any one of which should make a hit. It is essentially an American play, redolent of the soil, and appeals strongly to those who admire and respect the rugged virtues. It is of a class of productions which have more than ephemeral vogue, inasmuch as they illustrate familiar and comprehensive types of humanity which compel admiration and a degree of interest, perchance of affection, which the more sensational and lurid heroes of stagemod cannot evoke. Our New Minister has the form of familiar things in it. Its characters are not unlike those we have somewhere seen or met. It possesses the atmosphere of the home and hearth of New England. The play is pure in its dialogue, and innocent in its fun and in all its suggestions. It plays its part as a missionary in uplifting the drama to better things. Nothing could be more harmlessly recreative than the good people who disport themselves in its scenes. The character sketches are some of the best on the stage. The roles of Curt Holten, a veritable Josh Whitcomb, Sylvanus Bartlett, the post master; Darius Startle, the country detective; Obidiah Blorton, with settled opinions and Dorcas Tattleby the village gossip, are as natural as life. All of last year's favorites are retained in the company. John Barker, Henry R. Scott, Joseph Conyers and John Brawn. John Terriss will be seen for the first time here as the new minister. Charles Stedman, a capital actor, will play Lem Ransom, and Estelle Looine will be Nance, Lem's daughter.

SADIE MARTINOT.

Theatrical interest will undoubtedly centre at Music hall next Friday evening, when Sadie Martinot and her company, under the direction of Louis Nethercole, will appear in the newest play by Clyde Fitch, who is also the author of The Climbers, Beau Brummel, Barbara Freitchie, Lovers' Lane, etc. The marriage game was first produced at the beginning of this season. Though there is some difference in opinion relative to the propriety of its moral, there seems to be a general conclusion that it is one of the most forceful works which has yet been contributed by its author. It is founded upon the French of Emile Augier's play, Le Mariage d'Olympe. It is said to be adroitly handled and a series of dramatic scenes lead up to about as extraordinary and dramatic finale as could be conceived. As Lady Carnby, the central figure of the story, Miss Martinot is said to have been supplied with a character which fits her talents. Lady Carnby has evolved into a member of the British aristocracy from a music hall artist. She is reluctantly received by her husband's relatives, the Duke and Duchess of Montrose. A quiet life soon proves obnoxious to this flower of Bohemia, and with every disregard she returns to her former life after being a year married. The denouement is intensely dramatic. The husband, driven to desperation, denounces and casts her off, but this clever schemer is not so easily felled, and, having stolen a diary which compromises members of his family, she makes the terms of separation and alimony. The Duke of Montrose, a nobleman of the old school, considering family honor at stake, gives her the choice of returning the diary or never crossing the threshold. Scorning and deriding, she attempts to leave, when the final catastrophe occurs. The cast is of exceptional excellence, the principal characters being in the hands of such well-known players as Edwin Arden, Guy Bates Post, Mrs. McKee Rankin, Jeffry Lewis, Charles B. Welles, Grace Fisher, and Winchell Smith. The scenic investiture and appointments are rich and luxurious and the gowning of the female members of the cast is of the very latest style and of exceptional beauty.

THE POWER BEHIND THE THRONE.

A novelty in the current local amusements is announced at Music hall on Saturday, Nov. 2nd, where Mildred Holland, a young actress who has gained an enviable reputation in the world of dramatic art, will present with elaborate scenic and costume surroundings, for the first time in this city, her successful romantic play entitled The Power Behind the Throne. Miss Holland portrays the part of Aria, the daughter of a humble musician. The character is a legitimately serious and almost tragic role, which is entirely different from any part which she has hitherto assumed. There is every reason that Miss Holland should continue to meet with success in this line of work, as she possesses all the necessary requirements, a charming presence, and a marked degree of personal magnetism, sentiment and pathos. However it will be with some curiosity that she will be greeted on this occasion, because, as has been said, her character in The Power Behind the Throne is in such marked contrast to the line of parts in which she is most familiarly known.

Scientifically the production is on an elaborate scale, the costumes are said to be beautiful and historically correct. The furniture is carried by the organization.

A GLORIOUS RECORD

WHAT THE CIGAR MAKERS' UNION HAS ACCOMPLISHED.

Wonderful Effect Upon Longevity of Members and Their Wives—Millions
Paid in Benefits—How the Union
Has Grown.

President Perkins of the Cigar Makers' International union made his annual report to the membership. A referendum vote of the organization recently postponed this year's convention for three years, and as no report had been made to the membership since the convention in Detroit in 1896 President Perkins briefly summarizes the more important events and affairs of the international union.

Referring to the membership and wages during the period covered by the report, he says:

"The table showing the membership
and number of organizations shows that we did not lose in membership
during the stagnation period, and statistics show that we did not suffer to any extent in the matter of reductions of wages. As to numbers, the membership practically remained stationary during the panic period. The growth in the membership commenced with the revival of industry and reached its greatest height during the year 1900.

"Cigar makers to the number of 61, 935 are employed in union towns and cities, 15,160 find employment in jurisdiction places; total, 77,101. Twenty-one thousand and thirty are reported as hand workers, 26,672 as mold workers, 8,850 as filler breakers and rollers, 3,850 as machine workers and 4,250 apprentices. The number of nonunion cigar makers, as reported, is 35,583, and 3,230 females are reported as members of the union.

"The vital statistics are perhaps the most instructive and important ever compiled, showing, as they do, that despite the intense struggle engendered
by the present method of production and distribution and the tremendous wear and tear on one's nervous and physical resources, the average longevity of our members has been increased.

The figures show that in ten years the average length of life of members of the union has increased six years and that the average length of the lives of the wives and mothers has increased eight years. This remarkable showing and gratifying result is due chiefly to two causes—first, the improved condition of the members, such as better
wages, improved sanitary condition,
more freedom and better living, all
brought about solely through the trades union; second, the shortening of the hours of labor. The latter has a direct bearing upon the interesting fact that the average length of the lives of the wives of members has increased, which can be accounted for by the significant fact that the household duties of working of the wife commences one hour later and ends one hour earlier and by the fact that as the material condition of the husband is improved by better wages and more leisure the wife or mother is enabled to live better and within more pleasant surroundings.

Speaking of strikes and lockouts
statistics are as complete and comprehensive as possible, giving a complete history of all the trade movements, their results, cost, per cent of gains and losses and where located, and once more demonstrate that strikes are not failures. The tables furnish the gratifying information that trade disputes or strikes are growing fewer in number each year despite the fact that the membership is increasing and that the statistics show that we have made substantial gains in wages. I am persuaded that some of the difficulties could be avoided without a strike. A wise, level headed committee can do more with an employer with calm, logical argument than can be accomplished with threats and bragadoos. Strikes should never be called until a competent committee has exhausted
every effort to bring about a peaceful settlement. Always be cautious and never overconfident."

Other salient features of the report
are:

Unions in good standing Sept. 1, 1896,

unions in last five years, 91,543,400.

064,930.37.

To Insure Members.

The Window Glass association has under consideration the advisability of insuring all of its members for $1,000 each. Propositions from several life insurance companies will be considered by the executive board of the association. The association at present pays an insurance of $300, less the amount of the member's indebtedness to the association. By insuring the entire membership it is claimed that a much lower rate can be obtained.

Alabama Miners.

The coal miners and mine operators of Alabama have agreed on a basis of settlement of a wage scale for the ensuing year. It is agreed to renew the old wage scale schedule, with 45 cents per ton as the maximum, and to refer all local questions which have arisen at several mines to a joint arbitration committee.

Statistics collected in Germany showed that more than 50 per cent of the cases of consumption could be traced to the habitual breathing of dust tainted with injurious substances.

Like the bee, we should make our industry our amusement.

COST OF KEEPING CLEAN.

One of the Masculine Gender Keeps
an Account.

"Did you ever stop to think about how much it costs to keep a man clean, to keep in what the world would call a possible condition?" asked a rather fastidious gentleman yesterday, who also has an eye to the economical side of life.
"It is no small thing when you come to think about it, and independent of the things a man is required to buy during the year the bill will run up to a rather neat sum. A man is forced to buy many things which are never counted in the cost of living when he foots up the bill at the end of the year, and yet they tell in the aggregate when it comes to his bank account and his income generally. But I was thinking of the plain, ordinary provision of keeping oneself clean. Take, for instance, the matter of laundry. The average cost to a single man is at least 50 cents a week, and frequently the bill runs much above this figure. Clean clothes on this basis will cost $26 a year.
Then there is a fellow's barber bill, the cost of shaves, shampoos, hair cuts and shines and baths, and all these things tend to run the bill up.

"Supposing that a man will take two shaves every week—and this is the average—this would make a total of 104
shaves during the year, and at the minimum price of 10 cents for each shave it would amount at the end of the year to $10.40. Baths, on an average of one each week and at a cost of 25 cents for each bath, would cost $13 a year. If he averages two shaves a week at the minimum of 5 cents for each shave, the bill will amount to $5.20 for a year. One hair cut a month at the rate of 25 cents and one shampoo at the same rate would amount to $5.

"Taking these things and allowing for tips and things of that sort, it will be seen that a man will spend probably $75
every year in keeping clean, and when you come to think of this amount it will really clothe the average fellow who makes no effort to keep up with the changes which mark the course of fashion. As a matter of fact, there are a great many men who do not spend this much for clothes during the year. It may be safely estimated that the average man does not spend so much in clothing himself. So on this basis the average man spends more in actually keeping his body and his clothes clean than he does for the things which clothe his body, and these things manage to keep his bank account down to that extent."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Military Orthography.

A British soldier recently sent a letter to the war office containing a word that baffled the imagination of every clerk
and official to whom the puzzle was submitted. The mysterious word was spelled "yfe." It was repeated several times and seemed indeed to be the main subject of his communication. At length it occurred to one of the clerks to consult the hall porter, a grizzled veteran quite unhappily by heart school accomplishments.

"Can you tell us the meaning of this word, Simpson?" asked the brilliant clerk.

"I should think I could," replied the veteran, with mild contempt. "Y-fe spells wife, of course. What else could it spell, sir?"—London King.

ANTARCTIC PICTURES.

New York Artist Hopes to Paint
Scenes of Graham Land.

WILL LIVE ON DESOLATE ISLAND.

Correct Impression of Color Effects of Southern Latitudes Is the Goal Aimed At—An Expedition Also of Probably Great Scientific Value.

New York, Oct. 28.—One of the most novel and adventurous expeditions undertaken by an artist in search of new subjects in a hitherto untouched field is that to the antarctic seas, on which Frank Wilbert Stokes set out on Saturday, when he sailed from New York
on the Hesperides, bound for Buenos Ayres. There he will join a Swedish exploring party which is to start next month on the Antarctic for Graham Land, the unknown, ice locked territory which many scientists believe stretches to and includes the south pole.

He is the only American who goes
in any official capacity to face the dangers of the southern icefields, which,
though their perils have been described less widely and have claimed fewer victims than the frozen north, present
equal difficulties and the possibilities of equal rewards to the cause of science.

The Swedish expedition is one of three which have been equipped for antarctic exploration this year. The largest and the one which has the widest scope has been sent out from England after more than two years of careful preparation. This party, which is under Captain George Scott, makes its start southward from Australia.
The second is a German undertaking
under Dr. von Drygalski, who has had a vessel especially built on the model of the old south sea whales, with which to force a way through the icefields. The German start from India.

On a Desert Island.

The Swedish expedition, under Dr.
Otto Nordenskjöld, sailed from Göteborg on Oct. 16. After picking up E. W. Stokes at Buenos Ayres the party will sail for Tierra del Fuego, making scientific observations and collecting natural history specimens
among the different groups of islands
that dot the southern seas.

Before the close of the southern summer the Antarctic will reach Graham Land, and here Stokes will enter on the most important parts of his work.
For the next six months he is to be left, with five companions, in a land where few human feet have tread,
painting scenes which no human hand
before has tried to transfer to canvas.
Men have told of the wonders of the aurora borealis and the scenes presented by the pyramids of snow and ice
under the colors of the brilliant display of these natural forces, and Stokes hopes to be able to bring back with him pictures of the unknown
land which not only will have an entirely novel value to lovers of art, but will give for scientific purposes a correct impression of the color effects of these latitudes.

While Stokes with his little band of comrades is left in Graham Land the Antarctic will return to the island father north, where the scientists on board will continue their investigations into those hitherto almost unobserved regions. In the spring the men will be made to force a way through the ice
pack and reach, if possible, the south pole. The expedition expects to return to Montevideo about March, 1903.

Painting Under Difficulties.

Stokes has had many preparations to make for his trip, for the plan of establishing a studio within the polar regions is fraught with difficulties. The thoughtless artist would find his paints frozen and useless long before he could hope to transfer them from palette to canvas. Stokes will use a copper sheet
as a palette under which a two burner lamp is attached to keep the oils at a consistency for working.

The studio itself in which he will have to do much of his painting, since long strings with an easel in the outer air would be impossible in that temperature, is 11 feet long, 6 feet wide and 6 feet high. It is a double shell, with a space of three inches between the outer and inner structures as an additional precaution against the cold, and is so built that the sections in which it is made fit together in grooves, which are further strengthened with bolts.

Between the grooves raw paper is placed, while all the joints are lined thickly with felt. Two double oil stoves will be used to warm the den, and a skylight is snugly built in the canvas roof. A miniature cot, which folds up against the wall, will be the principal article of furniture apart from the instruments of the artist's trade, though even more important is the tiny cooking pot made after Stokes' own design.

Stokes already has had experience in polar regions. He was a member both of the Peary relief expedition and of the Peary north Greenland party.

No More Bodies Found.

of workmen is clearing away the debris at the scene of Friday's fatal fire
—Hunt, Wilkins & Co's furniture store on Market street. No bodies have been found since the twenty first victim was recovered from the ruins.
There are five bodies at the morgue
which cannot be identified, being burned beyond recognition.

Drunk Poisoned Tea Tree Mistake.

Philadelphia N. J. Oct. 28. Six of the day nurses at Muldenberg hospital were poisoned yesterday, and but for the promptness of Dr. Thompson and other physicians the staff they would probably have died. It is believed the young women were poisoned by acid which had been used the day previous to clean a vessel in which tea was made.

MILK IN LEIPSIK.

The Methods Used in That City to Protect Its Purity.

"I was talking to a man from Leipzig recently about the system of milk inspection in that city," said a well known New Orleans specialist, "and I am convinced they have the best system in the world, and in my judgment American cities would do well to copy it. They unquestionably succeed in getting pure milk, and there does not seem to be much chance for spreading disease in this way."
"In Leipzig they are very careful. Stables must be kept clean. The person who keeps cows must be experienced in the business. They are particularly careful about the cows that give milk used in feeding children. In order that no mistake be made the rules governing the dairy business require the cows to be branded. The rules provide for an injection of tuberculin lymph, and the cows must be healthy and must show no reaction after the injection. This injection takes place before the cow is placed in the stable. If a cow should happen to get sick, the fact must be immediately reported, and the veterinary surgeon who has charge of this matter reports the case to the council. The sick cow is generally isolated. This matter, however, is discretionary with the surgeon who su

Occasion Planned By Board Of Directors And Woman's Auxiliary.

On Monday evening a reception was tendered James A. Dummett, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A., b. the local association and the Woman's auxiliary, at the North church chapel on Middle street.

The chapel had been transformed into a beautiful reception room and presented a handsome appearance, with its decorations of gayly colored autumn leaves. As the guests arrived they were presented to the reception committee, who stood in the lower end of the hall, by an attentive corps of ushers. The reception committee were Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Kimball, James A. Dummett, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Hoehn, E. Scott Owen and Mr. Barker. A large number were present, including not only the clergy of the city and surrounding towns, but many of Portsmouth's prominent business men.

During the evening Miss Mignon B. Green presided at the piano and furnished music in her usual pleasing manner. After the guests had arrived, E. P. Kimball, president of the local association, stepped to the platform and opened the exercises by making a few remarks on the aim of the association and of the needs of our local association. Mr. Kimball was followed by the Rev. George E. Leighton, who made a short address, and also Rev. F. H. Gardner. At the close of the remarks the Woman's auxiliary of the association served refreshments, consisting of sandwiches, ices, fancy cake and coffee. The reception proved a delightful affair and was a most pleasing opening of the season's work.

LIKE AN OLD FRIEND.

The Yellow Covered Old Farmer's Almanac Here Again.

The Old Farmer's Almanac, which perpetuates the name of its founder, Robert B. Thomas, is one of the permanent institutions of New England. It was established in 1793 and although Robert B. has been dead for 55 years, the publication has been issued with equal regularity ever since.

Not only has it received a most cordial welcome from the farmer for a period of one hundred and ten years, but it has instructed and entertained the home circle with its suggestions, its valuable information upon topics which are annually collected for old and young readers.

Robert B. Thomas said at one time: "It is by our works and not by our words we would be judged; these we hope will sustain us in the humble though proud station we have so long held."

The long and honorable life of the Farmer's Almanac certainly bears evidence that the works of the founder have made a place for the publication which will, it would seem, make its existence extend through many centuries to come.

Robert Baily Thomas, the editor and founder, was born in West Boylston, April 24, 1766 and died May 19, 1846.

The issue for 1902 is at hand and differs in makeup but little from those of other years. It points out that the coming year is the sixth after Bissextile or leap year and until July 4 will be the 126th year of American independence.

There are to be five eclipses in 1902, three of the sun and two of the moon. None of them will be visible in New England except the total eclipses of the moon, which will occur October 16 and 17. The beginning will be generally visible in North and South America and the western part of Europe and Africa; and the end generally visible in North and South America and the northeast part of Asia. The eclipse begins Oct. 16 at 11hr. 17.3 m.; middle Oct. 17, 1hr. 2.4 m.; and ends Oct. 17, 2hr. 49.7m.

The other eclipses are a partial eclipse of the sun, April 8; total eclipse of the moon, April 22; partial eclipse of the sun, May 7; partial eclipse of the sun, Oct. 1.

The morning and evening stars will be as follows: Venus, evening star till Feb. 14; morning star till Nov. 28; then evening star rest of the year.

Mars, evening star till March 29; then morning star rest of the year.

Jupiter, evening star till Jan. 15; morning star till Aug. 5; then evening star rest of the year. Saturn, morning star till July 17; then evening star rest of the year.

The most favorable time for seeing Mercury in 1902 will be about Feb. 3, May 8 and Sept. 24 in the west after sunset, and March 17, July 15, and Nov. 4 in the east before sunrise.

The weather probabilities for January are to the effect that cold, clear weather may be expected the first week, warmer about the 8th, northerly winds the 11th and 12th then a warm storm with mild weather until the last week, when there will be rain or snow followed by clear cold weather.

In February, about the end of the first week, a cold spell with sleighing is predicted; growing warmer with frequent rain or snow about the middle of the month. The last of February will be stormy, with unsettled weather, becoming cold and clear the last few days.

March is to be, according to "Robt. B." a cold blustering month, generally: April, variable weather; May, rainy, milder weather, with showers toward the last of it; June, showery and the last few days hot, with thunder storms; July hot with intermittent thunder storms and showers, cool and generally fine for the last week.

The first part of August will be hot and sultry, the later part cool and fine; September, dry weather, pleasant in the middle of the month, frost toward the later part of it; October, cool and generally pleasant; November, warm in the early part of it, cold with northwest winds in the middle of it, warmer with rain or snow at the close; December will be clear and cold, milder weather about the 20th, but a snow storm is expected for Christmas day, the month ending with cold biting winds.

Washington's birthday falls on Wednesday, the coming year; St. Patrick's day, Monday; Patriot's day, Saturday; Memorial day, Friday; Labor day on the first day of September.

ber; Thanksgiving day, probably Nov. 27; Christmas day, Thursday. There is much information about the courts, and many subjects of public interest and reading for the young people.

SPORTING BRIEFS.

The Exeter-Andover game will come on the same day that Harvard plays Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. Pell, the Princeton captain and tackle, weighs 195 pounds. The lad has taken on weight since last season.

Pennsylvania's schedule this year includes fifteen games, more than any other team of any consequence in the country.

Ristine, Harvard's right half-back, has a brother on the Wabash, Ia., team, who is said to be a coming player, and who later will go to Harvard.

Butkiewicz, the Princeton guard, is the lightest man in the line, barring the ends. He tips the beam at 183 pounds, but his aggressiveness makes up for his lack of weight.

Paul Dashiell, who will umpire the three big games, Harvard-Pennsylvania, Yale-Princeton and Harvard-Yale, also, will have charge of the players in the West Point-Annapolis game.

Fred. Gilbert, the crack second baseman of the Milwaukee American league team, has signed to play second for the Phillies. This means that Billy Hallman will become a fixture at third base.

This is the last year Phil King, Princeton's great quarter-back, will coach the University of Wisconsin. He had a three years' contract at $3500 a year. He cancels it to go into business in Washington.

"Every club in the American league will be stronger next year than it was last season," says Ban Johnson.

"With the exception of Detroit and Cleveland, every club in our league will have players who were with the National league this season. The White Stockings have signed two National leaguers, Baltimore has three, Boston one, Washington four, Philadelphia five and St. Louis five. I only know of four men that have been taken from us by the National league."

Tickets for "Our New Minister" go on sale at Music hall box office this morning.

OBITUARY.

Miss Sarah A. Hughes.

Miss Sarah A. Hughes of Kingston, N. H., died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frances J. Currie, No. 45 State street, on Monday evening, after a long and painful illness from cancer. Miss Hughes came to this city several years ago from Dover and opened a boarding house on the corner of Vaughan and School streets, but her failing health caused her to give up the same about a year ago, and since that time she has made her home with her sister. She underwent an operation at the Cottage hospital, but the disease had made such inroads upon her system that it was impossible to save her life, and she gradually failed until death came to her relief. The loss falls heavily upon her sister, Mrs. Currie, who during her sickness has given her the best of care and made her last moments as comfortable as it was possible for human efforts to do. Miss Hughes leaves, besides her sister, four brothers, John of Chatham, N. B., and Jonathan and Charles who reside in the west.

The funeral services will be held at Christ church on Wednesday morning at ten o'clock.
